

They Leave us Alone Against Illegal immigrants

Which language are speaking the European Union Commissary and Italian Minister Maroni when they talk to each other? There is a wide choice among the 27 languages recognized by the European Union. But it seems that Mr. Maroni is not able to make himself understood, since Mrs. Malstrom said something incredible: that Italy refused the help that it was offered to deal with the migration wave. Please, dear lady! Surely Italy asked something that the European Union was supposed to do immediately – without being asked – since the borders of Italy also are the borders of Europe. But it is clear that this Europe exists only on paper and in Treaties. The trip of the fluffy “foreign Minister” of the European Union is almost laughable: she is the weak representative of a non-existing State. Being a woman, she is the least appropriate person: no Muslim governor will consider her seriously, since he is not even touching her hand because he does not want to be “contaminated”. And – according to the Koran – he considers her “one step below”.

Now let us come back to “reality”: a very grave situation that we must face without illusions. The project of including in Europe the so called “Mediterranean countries” blew up long before it started to be accomplished. Because – as all the projects of the Union – it was a paper dream of power, and a tribute to the Geopolitics that since the times of Hitler always proved to be doomed to fail. Geopolitics and the projects of the European Union lack one basic ingredient: peoples. Even if these countries are bordering the Mediterranean Sea, their peoples are completely different from us: they are Muslims, they have a tribal organization and therefore they always are at war one against the other – their people and their pseudo-governments. First of all, Italy has to abandon the inclusive and protective approach of the European Union; it must reestablish its national borders, suspend the dreadful Schengen

Treaty, a treaty that a country like Italy – whose borders are open to any type of landing – should have never undersign.

And of course borders must be protected at sea with patrols and ships, in our area and without the consent of Tunisia or of any other country, since they already said that they will not accept any interference in their own areas. It seems obvious that it makes no sense to let Tunisia proclaim the pride of its own territory, while Italy cannot do the same. And then as always someone will scream asking solidarity with the “poor” and the “desperate” that are fleeing; they will appeal to the duty of accepting the refugees, and remember a series of rules that Europe created to show that it is the most perfect and generous Democracy of all. The Italian Government must not listen to these voices, because its first duty is to safeguard and protect the life and the goods of the Italians. Something that it will be very difficult to do, even using the utmost strictness.

Now we just have to consider this situation in its real terms: what is happening in Africa, in the European East, in the Middle East is just apparently caused by local rebellions, by terrorist movements, by tribal feuds or inner military fights for power. The real cause lies behind these events, although nobody is paying attention to the analysis of historians, or to the reports of economists, politicians and journalists that have been experiencing this reality for many years. The upheavals that occurred in Albania, Romania, Greece, Somalia, Tunisia, Algeria and now in Egypt – the most dramatic one because in a way it marks a sort of final crisis – have been prepared and were given a start on purpose, so that Europe would be invaded, upset and finally destroyed in its cultural and political essence. This means that the final goal of the European Union was the destruction of national States through mass immigration, in order to annihilate the European identity.
